And then of course the paddock in front of us... that was where they kept all the tanks and trucks and things, you know, so and as I said in my letter you'd just wake up one morning and you had all these things suddenly appeared, you know, it was quite exciting. But then of course they disappeared just as quickly, they were just all packed up and gone. Then the tanks used to practice with the flamethrowers, over on Winnington Rig, on the hill there, and we used to watch that, get the line of tanks up, you could see the flames getting blasted up the road.
